CHAMBER MUSIC FESTIVAL AND INSTITUTE

The Fourteenth Season:

Russian Reflections

July 15–August 6, 2016

WELCOME TO MUSIC@MENLO

Dear Friends,

With our 2016 season, we are thrilled to offer a festival that illuminates the cultural dialogue between Russia and the West, from which Russian classical music grew into one of the most powerful and beloved of all musical genres.

Seven Concert Programs connect Russian and Western music through universal concepts. The reverence for skill inspires our “Mastery” program, which pairs the technically astounding Piano Quintet by Sergei Taneyev with music by Vienna’s most demanding compositional pedagogue, Johannes Brahms. The dignity of grief is movingly illustrated in our “Lamentations” program of Russian, French, and Jewish-inspired music, while the joy of fond remembrance brings the season to an ecstatic conclusion with our final program, “Souvenirs.” Alongside Music@Menlo’s thematic main-stage programs, four Carte Blanche Concerts devote themselves exclusively to Russian repertoire which displays that country’s unsurpassed musical instinct for instrumental invention and flair. Three fascinating Encounter lectures explore Russian music from diverse perspectives, and our popular master class and Café Conversation series will further deepen the festival experience.

A quick glance at the Festival Artists page will reveal delights sure to convince many to make Music@Menlo 2016 a priority, among them the return of the exciting young Russian violinist Alexander Sitkovetsky, in the company of his phenomenal duo partner, pianist Wu Qian; the festival debuts of the stunning Calidore String Quartet and one of the world’s great violinists, Kyoko Takezawa; the return of charismatic Tchaikovsky Competition gold medal winner violinist Elmar Oliveira, in the company of cellist Paul Watkins and debut pianist Alon Goldstein; the ascent to the main stage of four spectacular International Program alumni: violinist Katie Hyun, violist Matthew Lipman, cellist Nicholas Canellakis, and pianist Michael Brown; and lastly, but commanding very special attention, our beloved Schubert baritone, Nikolay Borchev, returns to give us Russian songs in his native language.

We hope that you choose to join us for this extraordinary musical and cultural journey through Russia. By its conclusion, we will know that faraway land in the deeply personal way that only music can inspire.

RUSSIAN REFLECTIONS

“Inspiration is a guest that does not willingly visit the lazy.”

—Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky

The soul of Russian music is impossible to capture with words. It is utterly unique and a confoundingly glorious tradition. Russia’s music is the sui generis expression of her people’s experiences. Yet, at the same time, many of the elements that distinguish Russian music ultimately defy cultural boundaries: love and death, passion and pathos, struggle and triumph.

Music@Menlo’s 2016 season, Russian Reflections, brings together Russian and Western composers to magnify the universal resonance of Russia’s musical culture. We’ll hear the Romantic poignancy of Rachmaninov and Shostakovich alongside Schumann, Fauré, and Dvořák; encounter the sophisticated elegance of Tchaikovsky next to music by Mozart and Mendelssohn; and marvel at the impeccable craftsmanship of Prokofiev, Taneyev, and Brahms. Over seven Concert Programs, these and other juxtapositions will cast Russia’s musical identity in sharp relief, while also revealing an essential character that transcends any cultural divide.

Concert Program I

TOWARDS THE FLAME

Russia Transformed

“If we wait for the moment when everything, absolutely everything, is ready, we shall never begin.”

—Ivan Turgenev

As Russia marched towards revolution, her music was likewise headed for radical change. The Romantic spirit of Tchaikovsky—nowhere in greater evidence than in his magnificent Serenade for Strings—found its torchbearer a generation later in Sergei Rachmaninov. Meanwhile, Rachmaninov’s boyhood schoolmate Aleksandr Scriabin developed a bold new language of his own, as audacious as it was fiercely expressive. This summer’s first Concert Program follows the course of Russian music at the turn of the twentieth century, from Romanticism vers la flamme (towards the flame). The evening culminates with The Rite of Spring, Stravinsky’s sea-parting masterpiece that forever changed Western music.

Sergei Rachmaninov (1873–1943)

Suite no. 2 in c minor for Two Pianos,
op. 17 (1900–1901)

Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky (1840–1893)

DARK PASSIONS

Shostakovich, Arensky || Mahler, Dohnányi

“Countless as the sands of sea are human passions, and not all of them are alike, and all of them, base and noble alike, are at first obedient to man and only later on become his terrible masters.”

—Nikolai Gogol

The compositional and emotional elements that distinguish Russian musical culture—its opulence, pathos, lyricism, and more—resonate far and wide. This summer’s second Concert Program delves into one of these characteristically Russian elements and reveals it to be truly universal. “Dark Passions” permeate the music of Dmitry Shostakovich and Anton Arensky, whose respective first piano trios bookend the program. Music by these composers’ Central European counterparts, Dohnányi and Mahler, echoes Shostakovich’s and Arensky’s turbulent strains.

Dmitry Shostakovich (1906–1975)

Piano Trio no. 1 in c minor, op. 8 (1923)

Ernő Dohnányi (1877–1960)

Concert Program III

ELEGANT EMOTION

Tchaikovsky, Glinka || Mozart, Mendelssohn

“Music is a pastime, a relaxation from more serious occupations.”

—Aleksandr Borodin

Concert Program III traces Tchaikovsky's deeply personal style back to Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, whose Fifth String Quintet demonstrates the beauty and elegance that so entranced the Russian composer. The program also offers music by another of Mozart's spiritual descendants, Felix Mendelssohn, whose String Quartet in D Major, op. 44, no. 1, is a perennial favorite from the quartet literature. After the charming Variations on a Theme of Mozart by Mikhail Glinka, the acknowledged father of Russian classical music, the program concludes with Tchaikovsky's luminous First String Quartet.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756–1791)

String Quintet in D Major, K. 593 (1790)

Felix Mendelssohn (1809–1847)

String Quartet in D Major, op. 44, no. 1 (1838)

Concert Program IV

ROMANCE

Shostakovich, Rachmaninov || Schumann, Dvořák, Fauré, Janáček

“There are passions that it is not for man to choose.”

—Nikolai Gogol

The element of romance may well be the soul of Russian music, whether manifested in the lovelorn strains of Rachmaninov’s songs for voice and piano or in the provocative verse of Aleksandr Blok, set powerfully to music by Dmitry Shostakovich. Concert Program IV places these composers alongside the mercurial German Romantic Robert Schumann, the urbane Frenchman Gabriel Fauré, and the ardent Czech nationalists Antonín Dvořák and Leoš Janáček—casting Russia’s uniquely romantic music in sharp relief while revealing an essential character that transcends any cultural division.

Robert Schumann (1810–1856)

Piano Trio no. 2 in F Major, op. 80 (1847)

Gabriel Fauré (1845–1924)

Romance in B-flat Major for Violin and Piano,
op. 28 (1877)

Antonín Dvořák (1841–1904)

Písně milostné (Love Songs), op. 83 (1888)

Sergei Rachmaninov (1873–1943)

Ne poy, krasavitsa, pri mne (Sing Not to Me, Beautiful Maiden), op. 4, no. 4 (1892–1893)

Leoš Janáček (1854–1928)

Pohádka (Fairy Tale) for Cello and Piano (1910)

Concert Program V

LAMENTATIONS

Mussorgsky, Rachmaninov || Fauré, Bloch

"It was a time when only the dead smiled, happy in their peace."

—Anna Akhmatova

Composed in the same year as Tchaikovsky's death and dedicated "to the memory of a great artist," Sergei Rachmaninov's Trio élégiaque captures an essential component of Russian musical identity. From Glinka to Shostakovich and beyond, Russia's composers have depicted melancholia with both a dignified nobility and a devastating dolor. Yet through these composers' empathy and perseverance, Russia's musical lamentations likewise extol the indomitability of the human spirit, ultimately uplifting the listener from even the darkest despair. Evident in Mussorgsky's chilling Songs and Dances of Death, these qualities likewise emerge in the music of Fauré and the Swiss-American composer Ernest Bloch.

Gabriel Fauré (1845–1924)

Élégie for Cello and Piano, op. 24 (1880)

Ernest Bloch (1880–1959)

Nigun (Improvisation) from Baal Shem: Three Pictures of Hassidic Life for Violin and Piano (1923)

Modest Petrovich Mussorgsky (1839–1881)

Pesni i plyaski smerti (Songs and Dances of Death) for Voice and Piano (1875, 1877)

Sergei Rachmaninov (1873–1943)

MASTERY

Prokofiev, Taneyev || Brahms

“Without craftsmanship, inspiration is a mere weed shaken in the wind.”

—Johannes Brahms

From the nationalist-minded autodidacticism of its beginnings, the modern tradition of Russian classical music bore the unmistakable stamp of its cultural heritage: Glinka and “the Five”—Balakirev, Borodin, Cui, Mussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakov—eschewed Western classicism in order to find their own, distinctly Russian, path. But nearing the turn of the twentieth century, as this tradition developed, a new generation of composers embraced the rigorous technical standards of Brahms and others of their Western counterparts, creating a powerful new repertoire: music as impeccably crafted as the most masterly German scores, yet with its Russian soul blazing more brightly than ever. Concert Program VI celebrates the “Mastery” of Russian music in the generation following Tchaikovsky, juxtaposing music by Prokofiev and Taneyev with the Opus 88 Quintet of Johannes Brahms, whose craftsmanship remains unsurpassed over a century later.

Johannes Brahms (1833–1897)

Sergei Prokofiev (1891–1953)

SOUVENIRS

Shostakovich, Tchaikovsky || Barber

“It is better to have dreamed a thousand dreams that never were than never to have dreamed at all.”

—Aleksandr Pushkin

Music@Menlo's 2016 season concludes on a poignant note: Concert Program VII brings together a collection of souvenirs—musical remembrances of things past, faraway, and dear—all essential characteristics of the Russian musical spirit. Samuel Barber's Souvenirs are delectable reminiscences of early twentieth-century New York City. Shostakovich's Spanish Songs take listeners half a world away but cast an equally heartfelt gaze upon the object of their nostalgia. The festival comes to a thrilling close with Tchaikovsky's exhilarating Souvenir de Florence, written after the composer spent three months in the birthplace of the Renaissance.

CARTE BLANCHE CONCERTS

Music@Menlo's 2016 Carte Blanche series explores the potential of four instrumental genres in the hands of Russian composers, through concerts curated by the artists themselves.

Celebrated pianist Alessio Bax performs a tour-de-force program of Russian piano repertoire, exploring European Romanticism viewed through the Russian musical tradition. The first half of the program is given over to the impressionistic atmosphere of Scriabin's Piano Sonata no. 3 in f-sharp minor, États d'âme, Mussorgsky's charmingly rustic Hopak, and Rachmaninov's arrangements of two salon pieces evoking Viennese high style by celebrated violinist and composer Fritz Kreisler. Stravinsky's epic Pétrouchka, featuring guest pianist Lucille Chung in the composer's own arrangement for piano, four hands, concludes the program.

The Center for Performing Arts at Menlo-Atherton

Tickets: $80 full price; $35 under age thirty

Russian violinist Alexander Sitkovetsky returns to Music@Menlo, joined by pianist Wu Qian in her festival debut, for a lavish program exploring the stylistic and emotional range of Russian works for violin and piano. The beguiling Romanticism of Cui's Sonata for Violin and Piano is an exquisite preface to Stravinsky's Baroque-inflected Suite italienne. The second half of the program is devoted to works written during World War II and following the fall of the Soviet Union, ushering in a decidedly darker mood. Desyatnikov's powerful Wie der alte Leiermann is an icy reimagining of Schubert's final song from Winterreise, and the rich textures of Prokofiev's Sonata no. 1 in f minor, op. 80, one of the most gripping works of the modern violin repertoire, close the program.

The Russian Quartet

Calidore String Quartet: Jeffrey Myers, Ryan Meehan, violins; Jeremy Berry, viola; Estelle Choi, cello

Tuesday, July 26, 8:00 p.m.

The Center for Performing Arts at Menlo-Atherton

Tickets: $80 full price; $35 under age thirty

The Calidore String Quartet's ambitious Menlo debut illuminates the powerful force of the Russian string quartet tradition in a program of late-nineteenth-century to mid-twentieth-century masterworks. Rachmaninov's wistfully rhapsodic Two Movements for String Quartet opens the program, followed by three works that recalibrate regional folk music to fit into classical and nationalistic compositional styles. Prokofiev's formal, classically structured String Quartet no. 2 in F Major, op. 92, Kabardinian, was inspired by the music he heard during a summer spent in the foothills of the Caucasus mountains. The second half of the program juxtaposes Stravinsky's enigmatic Three Pieces for String Quartet with Shostakovich's Quartet no. 2 in A Major, op. 68, a strikingly defiant work written during the throes of World War II.

Sergei Rachmaninov (1873–1943)

Two Movements for String Quartet (1889?)

Sergei Prokofiev (1891–1953)

String Quartet no. 2 in F Major, op. 92, Kabardinian (1941)

David Finckel and Wu Han offer a program that tells the story of Russian cello music from the twilight of the age of the tsars through the twenty-first century. The program begins with Shostakovich's groundbreaking Sonata in d minor, op. 40, followed by Lera Auerbach's haunting Sonata for Cello and Piano, composed for David Finckel and Wu Han by this spirited musical descendant of Shostakovich. Glazunov's sublime Chant du ménestrel (Minstrel's Song) opens the second half of the program, followed by Rachmaninov's Sonata in g minor, op. 19, one of the grandest Romantic cello sonatas, which dates from the same years as the composer's iconic Second Piano Concerto.

Dmitry Shostakovich (1906–1975)

Sonata in d minor for Cello and Piano, op. 40 (1934)

MICHAEL STEINBERG ENCOUNTER SERIES

The Encounter series, Music@Menlo's signature multimedia symposia led by classical music's most renowned authorities, embodies the festival's context-rich approach to musical discovery and adds dimension and depth to the Music@Menlo experience. The 2016 festival season's three Encounters explore diverse facets of Russia's extraordinary musical evolution, providing audiences with context for the season's seven Concert Programs and four Carte Blanche Concerts. They are an essential component of the festival experience for longtime music lovers and new listeners alike. The Encounter series is named in memory of Michael Steinberg, the eminent musicologist and Music@Menlo guiding light.

Encounter I: Searching for the Musical Soul of Russia

Led by Michael Parloff

Friday, July 15, 7:30 p.m.

Martin Family Hall, Menlo School

Tickets: $46 full price; $20 under age thirty

Returning Encounter Leader Michael Parloff inaugurates the summer's Russian music journey, providing an overview of that country's rich musical tapestry from the time of Mikhail Glinka to that of Dmitry Shostakovich. Clashing political and cultural passions provided the backdrop against which the drama of Russian music unfolded.

The journey will include a side trip to Paris—the early twentieth century's artistic crucible—where Sergei Diaghilev's Ballets Russes served as the catalyst for music of the most audacious imagination, including Stravinsky's Firebird, Pétrouchka, and Le sacre du printemps. This summer's first Encounter will explore the impact that this unique fusion of Russian nationalism and European modernism had on Western culture and Russia's complicated musical identity.

Encounter II: Dmitry Shostakovich: An Artist's Chronicle of a Russian Century

Led by Ara Guzelimian

Thursday, July 21, 7:30 p.m.

Martin Family Hall, Menlo School

Tickets: $46 full price; $20 under age thirty

Over the past two centuries, Russia has produced a veritable pantheon of musical giants—arguably none greater in the gravity of his artistic voice than Dmitry Shostakovich. Shostakovich was kept under Stalin's thumb for much of his career. Alternately lauded and condemned by the state, he bore an immense psychological oppression that would have silenced a lesser artist. Shostakovich persevered, chronicling his life's experiences in some of the most searing music ever composed.

This summer's second Encounter focuses on the life and music of Shostakovich. Led by Ara Guzelimian and featuring selections of the composer's chamber music, "Dmitry Shostakovich: An Artist's Chronicle of a Russian Century" will illuminate one of music history's most compelling figures, whose art powerfully expresses the indomitability of the human spirit.

Encounter III: American Sputnik: Van Cliburn's Victory in Cold-War Moscow

Led by Stuart Isacoff

Thursday, July 28, 7:30 p.m.

Martin Family Hall, Menlo School

Tickets: $46 full price; $20 under age thirty

In April of 1958, at the height of the Cold War, a tall, lanky Texan named Van Cliburn showed up at the first-ever Tchaikovsky Piano Competition in Moscow and captured First Prize. The press christened him the "American Sputnik." His recording with Soviet conductor Kirill Kondrashin became the first classical album to sell one million copies, and with it a new era of cultural exchange between the nations took root. On the surface, it seemed that musical beauty had, for a time, changed the world.

But behind the scenes, complex forces were at work—in the larger political realm and in the tragic personal lives of the participants. This summer's third Encounter, led by award-winning author Stuart Isacoff, will reveal some of those hidden aspects, using video clips to help illustrate that dramatic moment in history.

Music@Menlo's 2016–2017 Winter Series opens with a boldly immersive journey through J. S. Bach's Six Partitas for Keyboard (Clavier-Übung I), performed in their entirety by the charismatic Russian pianist Konstantin Lifschitz, an artist known for performing extraordinary feats of musical endurance. Composed while he served as Cantor at the St. Thomas Church in Leipzig, Bach's Six Partitas were the first of ultimately four installments written to explore the artful study of keyboard instruments. They are as renowned for their dazzling virtuosity as for their ingenious craftsmanship.

"To say that Mr. Lifschitz made his playing look easy would not be quite accurate. What he offered was a performance of such poetry that the question of whether executing it was difficult hardly came to mind."
